Being part of Transition Joshua Tree, I am suddenly forced out of my solitary life and must associate with groups of people. Because of this book, I am finding it shockingly easy to change my mind about being part of a group. That windbag who talks and talks? A couple of easy to understand facilitating techniques takes care of him. Meetings that never end? Not when you use the guidelines in this manual. I now craft an agenda, and have a timeline for each segment and the era of the never-ending meeting has come to an end. Using the 4 Direction Mandala information has made me much more understanding of where the other people in the group are coming from and I can appreciate and use their strengths while filling in for their weaknesses. A heartfelt thank you to Starhawk for sitting in a million hours of meetings so that I did not have to. Another thank you for figuring all of this out so that I didn't have to do it the hard way. Collaborative groups are the future, and I now have the tools to move forward into the future. I decided to take some time to figure out what exactly was bothering me about this group. Then I got to Chapter 5 of Starhawk's book and it was all there. A group with so much potential has terrifically horrible communication problems that cause a domino effect of conflict and other discord. I still have a lot to think about with this group but now I can use the concepts from the book to decide whether to discuss the issues I see with the group. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful.
